

War Incidents on Sea and Land in Which Human Interest Holds a Leading Part.

Above—Tragedy of the sea seldom reported by the camera. A submarine victim a few moments after being torpedoed. At Right—Taking the final plunge stern first. The pictures were taken from one of the ship's boats.

Copyright Underwood & Underwood

Settling fast by the stern. The stricken craft as seen two minutes before it disappeared. In the background is seen the rescue ship that picked up the survivors. This was not a case of spurlos versenkt, for the Hun did not kill one of the crew.

International Film.

War has no terrors for these little people as long as the porridge holds out. London children made homeless by Hun air raids being cared for by the Salvation Army. No signs of starving Britain are visible here despite Germany's claim.

Copyright Underwood & Underwood

Here's the Hibernian Paradox, Irishmen who won't fight. Students of the National University at a Sinn Fein meeting in Dublin. All are of military age, but refuse to enlist and devote themselves to breaking up loyalist meetings.

Photo International Film.

American buglers blowing evening colors in a small French village. The children especially rejoice at this ceremony and have learned to salute our flag. Note the two youngsters with wooden guns at present arms and the little chap with his hand at the salute.

Copyright Underwood & Underwood

War hasn't lost its picturesque side, even on the western front. British cavalry making a detour to avoid the big shell crater in the foreground. When Haig breaks through, these men will be in the vanguard pursuing the Hun.

Copyright Underwood & Underwood